

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Watches the Parade Opposite Independence Hall. She Tells of Those Who Will Go to the Princeton Prom Tomorrow—One on Germantown

AREN'T you still thrilled to pieces over yesterday's parade? From the minute I entered the grand stand opposite Independence Hall until the last waltz was played at the foot of the Liberty Bell it seemed to me as if it had been just one wild succession of cheers, though the cheers at the end were stopped when the eight white horses came slowly along with their empty saddles.

There was the dearest old lady on the front pavement of Independence Hall, who waved and cheered and cried all through the parade.

I never saw so many people. Eddie Cassatt was on the stand in "bits." He had a light gray derby hat and a pair of green tie. I have noticed how many of the men who have finished their uniforms off since they were mustered out have taken to bright colors.

Beauvau Borie, Jr., and his daughter, Patty, were also on the stand and the John Newbolds and their daughter, Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Mason Lisle and Frances Sullivan and the Percy Keatings and their daughter, Mary.

Major Taylor was walking with his horse hospital No. 10, you know, and I saw Arthur Newlin looking up into the stand and bow and Harry Dillard and several others of the doctors were to be recognized. Colonel Hart was in an auto at the head of No. 10.

I could not get why the Statesburys were on the steps of Independence Hall on chairs, and Jimmie Cromwell with them, too, but later when the Mayor arrived and went up and spoke to them they joined him and Mrs. Smith and walked to the grand stand, taking their seats several rows back of the Governor.

Nannie Lewis Beale and her two children were on the grand stand and one of the little ones could not understand that the parade was really coming and kept saying, "Why don't they make a noise?" But when they really did come he seemed to be satisfied with the cheers.

It was certainly thrilling beyond words, and when the waltz music came it was just more than human nature could stand, and I confess it, I cried, and when the infantry went by and I remembered their going off in New York last May and how many of the 110th, for instance, had not come back and the 100th, too! Well, they did, gloriously and we're so proud of them we don't know what to do, but in our lifetime at least let there be no more wars.

WELL, after all the excitement of yesterday there's some of another kind to come for a lot of girls who are going up to Princeton for the prom this week-end. A bunch of them are going up together, Mary Page, Helen Hope Wilson, Frances Watson, Lucy Grey, Heytie Steiner and Mary Tyler, and Mrs. Grey. Lucy's mother is going to chaperone them. Then Edith Hutchinson and Mary Norris, Rebecca Thomson and Peggy Thayer are all going, too. I think most of them except Rebecca and Peggy will come out next year. Mabel Reid is another one in the party, also a debutante.

These summer parties are a sort of preparation for the social season to come, and, really, these girls need to have that shock because they have had so little entertaining in the last few years that it will be a horrible blow to them next year to discover that there are such things as teas and dances and dinners and luncheons. It's going to be wonderful season and they are sure to be, because they certainly have worked during the last two years.

PASSED Miss Rebecca Newhall on Chestnut street the other day and she had an awfully pretty dress on. It was dark blue with a pleated skirt and the waist was long and embroidered in silk. Then she wore a rather broad-brimmed hat of dark blue with brilliant flowers—red, yellow, white—all over the crown.

I HEARD the Twenty-eighth, or rather a member of it, get off a "hot one" on Germantown yesterday. He hadn't been parading. He had been discharged, but he was still in uniform and the red keystone was very noticeable. You can imagine how he felt. He'd been overseas fighting Germans and his goal for about two years had been Germany. He had helped capture more than a German gun and all morning he had been standing on a street corner cheering men who had also fought and conquered Germans.

And in the afternoon he stopped at Thirtieth and Chestnut to light a cigarette and somebody thought he looked like the Philadelphia and went up to him to be the only stationary thing on the street, and said, "Is this where you get the car for Germantown?" And he almost dropped his precious cigarette as he exclaimed, "My gosh! Is there such a place as that in this country?"

PENN CO-EDS TO GIVE THREE OF OWN PLAYS

Fair Students Will Furnish Tonight's Feature of Campus Drama Week

Tonight the co-eds at the University of Pennsylvania will play their part in the campus drama week by the production of three plays, written, coached and acted by undergraduates.

The girls' literary society, "The Quill and Bauble," which presented a similar program last year, will give its plays this year at Columbia Hall, Broad and Oxford streets, with dancing to follow the theatricals.

The author of one of the plays, Miss C. Ruth Wilson, will meet the leading role. Her play is "The Stranger in the House." William Rex Crawford has been recruited from the ranks of male students to play opposite her. This production is a problem play which is said to settle several interesting social questions.

"The Two of Them," was written by Miss Margaret Fisher, and is played by G. Gerhart Albrecht and Miss La Rue Keller. Much interest is felt in the exact nature of this play, as the girls have not published the details of any of their work.

The last play is "The Shoes of a Lady," by Miss Helen Bailey, who wrote one of the most successful "Quill and Bauble" plays last year. The cast producing this drama consists of Misses Ida Whitaker, Elsie Stevens, Helen Whitney and Henrietta Weber, and the masculine assistant in this case is Gilbert Wilcox.

An interesting but mysterious feature to complete the evening's entertainment is labeled "A Tenny Tirade," which will be rendered by Misses Fannie Baum and La Rue Keller.

PRESENT COMEDY IN FRENCH
Elaborate Program Staged Last Night by University Organization

A production, entirely in French, of "Miquette et Sa Mere," a modern French comedy, was presented last night in the Bellevue-Stratford ballroom by members of the Cercle and Salon Francais at the University of Pennsylvania.

The acting and diction of the students who played the leading roles have done credit to native Frenchmen themselves and individual triumphs were scored by several of the actors and actresses.

The principal parts were taken by Carlos Berguido, who has made a reputation on the campus in theatricals; Miss Dorothy Buckler, who had the leading role in the Philomathean plays last year; Margaret Ashbrook, and Urbain T. Holmes, who played an old man's part with distinguished skill. William R. Crawford, who is appearing this week in four different productions on three successive days, and in three languages, won individual applause. Others in the cast were Edward Browning, of Mask and Wig fame, and Joseph Cannon.

The production was elaborate. A dance followed the play, the proceeds of which go to the French war relief committee of the Emergency Aid.

TO GREET COLONEL MEEHAN
San Salvador Council, K. of C., Holds Public Reception Tonight

Spillane, the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Cavanaugh, Lieutenant J. L. N. Wolf, George W. Edmunds, James A. Elsherty and Michael F. Quinn.

P., which became the 100th Infantry. He went overseas in May, 1918. He resides at 1935 Ridge avenue with his mother.

PHILOPATRIANS REHEARSING
Will Present "Broadway Jones" for Charity

Rehearsals have been begun by the Philopatrian Players for their twenty-seventh annual performance, "Broadway Jones," which will run the week of June 9 at the Broad. The proceeds of this year's play will go to the Magdalen Asylum, House of the Good Shepherd, Germantown, where the children in charge are badly in need of funds to maintain the institution.

James J. Skelly, well known in amateur theatrical circles, will direct the performance and play the part of Broadway Jones. The leading feminine role will be taken by Miss Flora Apeldorn. Others in the cast are John J. Callahan, of St. John's Dramatic Club; Manuquyn Carroll Dugan, a member of the Enterprise Dramatic Club; Germantown; Miss Barthmeyer, Miss Mary Carr; Hugh P. Dunlap, Martin Hickey and Robert Gorman.

CORSETS HELD TAXABLE
All Garments Underwear Except Outer Dress, Say Federal Experts

It's all settled! Corsets are underwear. So are camisoles, "teddies," union suits, bloomers, etc., and so forth and so on. For weeks experts of the internal revenue bureau have pondered definitions of underwear and other articles subject to the so-called luxury taxes which went into effect May 1 in preparation for returns governing administration of the tax.

Arguments were made on one side and the other seeking to show that certain articles were not underwear but something else. Finally the experts developed this definition of underwear: "Any garment worn under the outer dress, such as—"

And here follows a list of things silky and "lacy" and ribbed. The tax is 10 per cent of the selling price in excess of $5 per garment.

PRESBYTERY FIXES AID TERMS
Ministers of Presbyterian Churches Must Receive at Least $1800 a Year

Salaries of ministers of Presbyterian churches receiving aid from the Presbytery of Philadelphia must be at least $1800 per year, according to a recommendation by the Presbyterian committee on city missions and church extension. The twenty-seventh annual report of the city missions committee, of which the Rev. Dr. William P. Fulton is secretary, shows receipts amounting to more than $40,000. During the year thirty churches and missions were aided, two of these becoming self-supporting.

An aggressive program of downtown work, utilizing four strategic centers and employing a large staff of deacons, teachers, visitors and nurses, has been arranged by the committee.

A Tribute and a Plea
To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:
Sir—The events which took place today in paying homage to the Twenty-eighth are chronicled in all their phases in your evening edition, and speaks well as to what an up-to-date afternoon paper should be—and today's is a thriller, and no doubt will be a eye-opener to the newspapers of other large cities. Your "leader" on the editorial page is a corker.

But there is a suggestion I would like to offer—and that is that you give a boost to our marines and sailors on the editorial page; a boost to the bill which was introduced in the Legislature March 13 to pay to them the sum of $50. I do not know whether it will "die" in the committee or not, so if you would give the members a little reminder it would have some effect on other matters you have so earnestly advocated for the general public, especially on our noble sons of the grand commonwealth. The bonus of this grand ($50) was very welcome to me.

The Keystone Mothers
To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:
What a magnificent sight they made—Our Keystone Boys in their own parade! I had journeyed far to see Our Men For I'll never behold such a sight again. I knew not one, but I loved them all. For the way they'd answered Duff's call. In front of me two little old ladies stood. Each with a mould of old-fashioned Motherhood. With grey cheeks, hair streaked with white. And eyes that glistened with fond delight. Hand in hand, on the edge of the crowd. They waved their flags and cheered aloud. And I thought as I heard their joyful noise. "These Mothers are welcoming home their boys."

While deep in my heart I blessed the two. And was glad for their sakes that the war was through. Still the thought of other lads, fine as these. Who would never return from overseas. Made the scolding teardrops sudden rise To blur the scene before my eyes. The two old ladies turned to me. As I dried my eyes, and smiled to see. My tears; one child, "Don't be sad." And the other, "Today we should all be glad."

So trying to match their cheerful air. I murmured, "Perhaps your boys march 'there'." The first one smiled as she said "Oh, no. But I'm glad to remember he wanted to go. And he went, as he should, he was just nineteen."

"(She did not alter her smile serene And never faltered her level glance. 'But he had to stay behind in France. Of course, it was hard to give up Jack. But we couldn't expect that they'd all come back.'"

She touched the gold star on her coat And I choked the sob that rose in my throat For I knew, recalling her hearty cheers. That this was no time for weeping tears. Then the other smiled, too, as she softly said. With an added lift to her proud-held head. "My boy was his chum—the enlisted, too. He was 'Missing'—that's all we ever knew. Of course, it was hard, as such things will be. But they did their best, so why can't we? And if our two children can be so brave Their mothers, I guess, can at least behave. So we thought it but right to come and cheer."

Then they turned to the troops that marched before. And cheered and waved their flags once more. Oh, brave little mothers, in gold-starred black. Who can cheer for those whose boys are back! Oh, Iron Division, staunch and brave.

Interest Here So Great That Larger Meeting Quarters Are Obtained

Interest in the $150,000 drive now under way here under the auspices of the Friends of Irish Freedom has grown to such an extent that the executive committee has been forced to obtain larger meeting quarters for the team captains.

About a hundred captains of teams representing parishes throughout the city will meet tonight in the dining room of the second floor of the Continental Hotel, Ninth and Chestnut streets, at 7:30 o'clock. Reports will be read, and plans will be discussed to bring the campaign to a successful close. The team captains had been meeting at Gaelic Hall, 324 North Twentieth street.

The summer school is extended primarily for young men who were receiving instruction in seminaries when the war interrupted their preparation, and for others returning from the national service who desire to prepare for the ministry and who are fitted by previous education to take the course. While the school is intended mainly for men who have been in the national service, and its resources will be devoted to their maintenance, other students will be received if they are recommended by the heads of the seminaries in which they were educated.

There will be two terms of five weeks each, the first from July 1 to August 6, and the second from August 7 to September 12. Doctor Bartlett and his associates believe that a competent student will be able to accomplish the equivalent of a half year's work in the seminary during the summer. Thus, if he takes summer school, he will be able to complete his full course for the ministry in a little more than two years instead of the usual three years.

"Hard work will be the end and aim of the summer school," Doctor Bartlett said. "The committee does not contemplate adding any of the purely social and recreational features commonly associated with summer schools. However, there will be occasional lectures and addresses arranged independently of the formal courses."

EPISCOPAL SEMINARIES GIVE SUMMER COURSE

Divinity Students Who Served in War Have Opportunity to Catch Up in Study

Young men from the national service who desire to prepare for the ministry will have an opportunity to cut a year's studies from the usual theological course by attending a summer school conducted by the faculties of the seminaries of the Protestant Episcopal Church at Middletown, Conn., which begins its work July 1.

The Rev. Dr. George G. Bartlett, dean of the Philadelphia Divinity School, is chairman of the committee in charge, which includes Dr. H. E. W. Foubre, dean of the General Theological Seminary, New York; Dr. George Hodge, dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.; and Dr. William P. Ladd, dean of Berkeley Divinity School, at Middletown.

The summer school is extended primarily for young men who were receiving instruction in seminaries when the war interrupted their preparation, and for others returning from the national service who desire to prepare for the ministry and who are fitted by previous education to take the course. While the school is intended mainly for men who have been in the national service, and its resources will be devoted to their maintenance, other students will be received if they are recommended by the heads of the seminaries in which they were educated.

"Hard work will be the end and aim of the summer school," Doctor Bartlett said.
